To whomever it may concern,

As a consumer and student in the computer technology sector I have an interest in the doings of and in the case against Microsoft. Being such, I feel it is my duty to voice my opinion of disapproval for the proposed final judgment. My observation of Microsoft leads me to believe that any weak judgment against them will not have any punitive effect and it may temper a perception within the company that they are able to break the law without consequence. If that were to happen, the technology consumer and employment markets may become irreparably damaged by their abuses.

Thank you,

Joseph Theriault
